My Why

I am passionate about fostering the growth of women in their personal and professional lives. I know first-hand how a growth-mindset and a dose of courage can make for a happier existence. I also know how a tribe of like-minded women can lift you up faster and higher than you've ever experienced going it alone.

I've had the privilege of working closely with leaders around the globe, in Fortune 500 companies and start-ups alike. My work provides a unique lens into professionals' lives and how they function. I see amazing personal strengths at play, as well as blind spots to overcome. Interestingly, there are commonalities in the issues (good and bad) that women face. I want to share my learnings and insights, garnered from over two decades working as both an executive coach and leadership consultant, to help elevate other women.

Women have many unique capabilities as leaders, and it is time to embrace these skills for the greater good. I've created this series to provide a safe and engaging space for women to develop their leadership chops and have fun while doing it!
